The American government likewise realizes that Carranza will not enter into any compromise arrangements or negotiations with Huerta nor any stroup surrounding him.

For this reason has President Wilson insisted throughout on the elemination of the Huerta cotterie as a necessary first step to peace, and he always has contended, too, that the Mexicans must declaration first from Carranza to would not accept mediation by first step to peace, and he always has contended, too, that the Mexicans must compose the situation themselves.

Carranza's utterances was regarded by high officials here, in fact, as an effort to show no less patriotism than the Constitutionalist chief at this time.

The Washington government does not construe its activities in the situation as included in the terms "interference" or "mediation." The Washington viewpoint is that the United States has the right to say exactly on what conditions it will recognize any government. It has sought to emphasize through its representatives that under no conditions would Huerta or any one of the group surrounding him be recognized, and has announced also that it will not recognize the legality of any acts of the Mexican Congress, which was echeduled to convene to-day.

As they proceeded into the Pope's private library the Swiss and the Noble Guards rendered military honors. The Pope was cordial and cheerful. He expressed briefly his great satisfaction at being able to greet the American sailors. The Pope requested the officers to be seated next to his chair, and, after a lengthy conversation, proceeded, in company with the three admirals and the captain, to the adjoining hall, where he spoke a few words to each of the officers gathered thore. He then gave apostolic benediction to the officers and sailors.

After the papal audience the rear-admirals and other officers were received by Cardinal Merry Del Val, papal secretary of state.

of War Garrison declared at a dinner to-night, that the people of the United States, as a whole, did not regard the army in the proper attitude.

"For one thing," said he, "I think that people fail to discriminate between their absolute hatred of bloodshed and war and the function of the army in respect thereto. For the fire-man, physician, engineer and for the clergyman, none of us has words other than of praise and encouragement. And yet for the soldier, whose very presyet for the soldier, whose very presence is a protection against others attempting to use force, and whose efforts in our behalf when force is used against us are essential to our defense, the people have either a negligent attitude or very often one of disapproval. I cannot on any reasonable ground account for this.
